Why is it that hundreds of men have been daily besieging the doors of each department, triotic course at house, where, though terference in the affairs of other powers. besieging the doors of each department, imploring most pieteously for office, with a resolution worthy of a better cause?—
Why is it that the White House is so crowded with hungry hordes of office-seekers, that it is said that the President seekers, that it is said that the President efficient and faithful services in defending and guarding our rights in both branches of the Legislature, and especially during its recent session, to which it is not tickle the self-pride of England by only necessary for the intelligent render idle boasts about the Anglo Saxons by to refer, to admit that we had not a dele- vapid compliments to British prowess and gate in either branch of our Legislature prosperity, and by useless commendation who understood our interests better, or of England as the glorious mother of the was more ready or competent to defend fair shoot of liberty on this soil. Silent While our delegates from the West too dignity were better on the part of our American Ministers than such flippant generally enter into a wholesale business rhetoric as this-the staple of such apes in bartering off our treasury, or rather the of aristocracy as Lawrence, or such anticredit and faith of the Old Dominion, in quated politicians as our present respecextravagant appropriations to the south-east, in consideration of a few thousand St. James. Mr. Buchanan will insult his ed that the simple circumstance of being a Whig or Democrat effects a man so far as honesty or dishonesty is concerned. No honest man, be he Whig or Democrat, will
